CONSENTRY'S LANSHIELD SWITCH NAMED A FINALIST FOR 2008 TECHWORLD AWARD IN NETWORK PRODUCT DEVICE CATEGORY

WHO: ConSentry Networks announced today that its LANShield™ Switch has been named a finalist for a 2008 Techworld Award in the network product device of the year category. The Techworld Awards, sponsored by Techworld.com, are given to products that help IT professionals in their daily roles.

WHAT: The LANShield Switch is based on a next generation switching architecture that integrates Layer 7 identity and application intelligence to the LAN access edge. Intelligent switching integrates knowledge of network users, their roles, and applications with a programmable, wire-speed switching platform purpose built for the performance and latency requirements of the LAN edge. This combination allows IT to bring business context into the LAN, dramatically simplify LAN security, deployment and operations, and keep pace with evolving business requirements.

WHEN & WHERE: Winners of the Techworld Awards will be announced at a gala dinner in London on Wednesday, June 11, 2008.

About ConSentry Networks
