Tidal Networks changes its name to ConSentry Networks

New name better reflects our solution for addressing internal threats

MILPITAS, Calif. . April 6, 2005 . Tidal Networks, Inc., a stealth-mode networking startup focused on addressing the growing internal security challenge for enterprises, today announced that it has changed its name to ConSentry Networks. The name ConSentry is derived from the words “Control” and “Sentry” reflecting the ability of our secure networking solution to inspect and control network traffic in real-time.

Please update your records to reflect our new name.

About ConSentry Networks

ConSentry Networks is a secure networking company delivering access enforcement for “self-defending LANs”. ConSentry Networks’ executive management team is comprised of the co-founders of Foundry Networks and VINA Technologies as well as industry veterans from National Semiconductor, Centillion, Juniper and Nortel. Headquartered in Milpitas, CA, ConSentry Networks is backed by the blue-chip venture capital firms Accel Partners and Sequoia Capital.
